

the NAB should not be able to limit any type of programming that I wish to purchase through a subscription service such as XM radio. XM should be free to offer whatever programming it's subscribers want and are willing to pay for. If broadcast radio cannot offer programming, including traffic and weather, on a competitive basis with subscription services, then the market should determine who prevails - not legislators or the FCC.

I am not in favor of allowing the NAB to dictate what I can listen to on a subscription service that I pay for.
